8. He welcomed further Chinese investments and collaboration in new emerging sectors including digital economy, agricultural modernization and agricultural trade, and renewable energy. He encouraged China's involvement in Automotive High-Tech Valley (AHTV). In addition, he expressed Malaysia's willingness to export more to China, including in agro-commodities sector.
9. President Xi emphasized China's new paradigm of development, with its focus on opening up as well as on high-quality development and cooperation. All these would unlock new opportunities for a much greater collaboration, particularly in trade and investment.
10. As for Chinese investments, President Xi highlighted the importance of building on the already good momentum by exploring new areas such as renewable energy, semiconductors and the digital economy. He hoped for policy support for Chinese investments in Malaysia.
11. Prime Minister Anwar apprised President Xi of his visit Tsinghua University, the President's alma mater, during which he delivered a lecture and met Malaysian students, who constituted the largest number of international students there. He welcomed Tsinghua University to set up its first branch campus in Malaysia. The Prime Minister also looked forward to concrete cooperation on TVET and increase in the number of students from China in Malaysia.
12. Both Leaders stressed that as Asian countries Malaysia and China share common civilizational values such as mutual respect, inclusiveness, justice, care and compassion. At the same time, both governments are focused on people centred development, including efforts aimed at eradicating poverty and environmental protection, as well as on promoting peace, security and prosperity for all. President Xi shared his efforts on poverty eradication and China's readiness to share experience in this area.
13. In this vein, President Xi expressed his support for the Malaysian Unity Government's Malaysia Madani concept. For his own part, Prime Minister Anwar expressed support for the principles and values of President Xi Jinping's global initiatives and his vision of a Community for a Shared future for Mankind, including the proposal for a Malaysia – China Community for a Shared Future.
14. Prime Minister Anwar and President Xi also exchanged views on regional and international issues. It was agreed that cooperative approaches, particularly dialogue, multilateralism were the best ways of overcoming challenges and chaos, at the regional and global levels. In this regard, the two leaders expressed their unequivocal support for ASEAN Centrality.
